WPSU Penn State, an outreach service of The Pennsylvania State University, helps faculty disseminate research to the public, educational audiences, and other researchers through high quality multimedia solutions such as videos, websites, television programs, and education materials. WPSU has a history of utilizing new media to extend access to education that spans fifty years, and we still hold to that calling. Beyond the core of our public radio and television mission, our staff has the creativity and experience to help you achieve your vision and tell your story. Our state of the art studios are located close to the academic heart of the University. WPSU has received numerous regional and national awards including Emmy, Telly and Edward R. Murrow Awards. Recent examples of WPSU'S work with Penn State faculty include: "Finding Your Roots: The Seedlings," a web series following young people at a genetics and genealogy camp done in collaboration with Penn State Professor Nina Jablonski and the popular PBS series "Finding Your Roots with Henry Louis Gates, Jr." "Managing Risk in a Changing Climate is a PBS television documentary produced in collaboration with Penn State's Network for Sustainable Climate Risk Management (SCRiM) with funding support from the National Science Foundation.
