The mission of the University Libraries is to inspire intellectual discovery and learning through robust information resources and academic collaborations in teaching and research that connect the Penn State community and citizens of Pennsylvania to the world of knowledge and new ideas. We fulfill this mission through: Provision of access to research resources such as books, patents, articles, maps, data and more than 7 million other items. Support for learning endeavors such as course reserve services, course related instruction, and embedded research consultation. Provision of spaces and equipment for individual study, group projects, and internal and external programs, displays and events; Advanced research services including geospatial visualization, data management, researcher impact metrics and profiles, copyright and intellectual property consulting, statistical consulting, curation of digital materials, assistance with identification of potential collaborators and research growth opportunities, as well as publishing and repository services. Subject librarians have expertise covering all areas of research, and can aid in maximizing the efficiency and effectiveness of the researcher by facilitating discovery. The Libraries are open to the public and operate in over 23 locations across Pennsylvania as well as online to World Campus constituents and alumni via the Alumni Library.
